

LORCA SMETANA - CORPORATE TRAINING

"An organization is an ecosystem, where every element shifts overall health. In an era of rapid change, the intelligent leader designs for flexibility, resilience, and innovation, both of structure and in people. In executive coaching and corporate retreats & training, I work with both parts so that they support each other.

Within a unique mental framework, hidden areas of fragility are made visible and foster a culture of resilience design awareness and action.

Resilient people consistently exhibit natural leadership qualities.

Self-leadership can be felt in any level of an organization, in streamlined thinking and in expansive communication skills that minimize the delay of difficult decisions and conversations. In a nutshell, I help people feel clear, then stronger, then safe, then creative. In all this work, we decrease the fragility of an organization under stress."

I am pleased to provide a limited number of engagements for Executive Coaching and Corporate Retreats. Please inquire below for availability.

ABOUT LORCA

Lorca Smetana is a wayfinder -- the creative partner of aspirational resilient leaders, helping them design for new levels of energy, innovation, compassion, and recovery. A survivor of the 1986 school mountaineering tragedy on Mt. Hood, Lorca has been teaching and learning for over thirty years about risk, personal sustainability, recovery from tragedy, and joy. She holds an MA in diplomacy and is on the faculty in Human Leadership Development at Montana State University. A TEDx and keynote speaker, a celebrant, a writer, and a regenerative farmer, she has helped leaders better understand what it is to be a vibrantly resilient ecosystem.

TESTIMONIALS

"My goal for working with Lorca as my coach was to sharpen my focus and validate my decision to leave my 20+ year software development career.

She didn't do this. Instead, she guided me away from my "just get 'er done" instincts and compartmentalized goal setting, towards a calm and unfamiliar place. A place where I could notice and feel, and release the underlying anxieties I tried to hide, even from myself. A place where I could stop pleasing others at my expense and start living an authentic, creative, and well integrated life. Lorca gave me what I never knew to ask for and couldn't see I needed. I am grateful."

"Dare I say it, Lorca Smetana is one of the few women who I knew would be just fine during the pandemic. She's built her career working with a variety of clients (including Amanda and me!) on resilience training -- deep, hard work that touches all facets of everyday life. And she practices what she preaches, running a farm along the Gallatin with her family. The world would be in a better spot if there were more Lorcas in it!"

Lorca Smetana is a thoughtful, insightful, and patient facilitator of resilience training. She listens very carefully and asks the right questions to stimulate participants' thinking about their own stories, identity, and path."

What a gift it was to work with you. I doubt that I would be here in Indonesia if it were not for your timely nudging and encouragement at a time when I was stuck and feeling overwhelmed. You helped me find the warrior within and also be gentler with myself. It was very telling when my boss told me in mid-July, "You are sparkling, Nina. You seem really happy!" I was happy because I was liberated from my daily stress and instead was dictating the terms of my work and more importantly, I was excited about the grand adventure on the horizon for my family! Our time together helped make my mental transitions that laid the groundwork for the change possible."
